

Spiš Castle stands near Prešov. Count Filip lived in the castle with his wife Hana and his daughter Barborka. But Philip's sister also lived there. There was love and peace, everyone who needed help get her. One day Philip noticed that his wife was a little pale. He called the doctors and they told him that Hana was dying. Philip arranged a solemn funeral for her, attended by the Counts from afar and far away. His sister took care of Barborka. She loved her as if she were her own. One day Philip went hunting. As he thought he shot a deer, he shot the count's son from Lubovna Castle. The count from Ľubovňa castle began to warn him to watch out for Barborka. When Philip returned to the castle, he began to ask for forgiveness from God. Nicholas tried to enter the castle in vain. One day a soldier disguised as a boy from the village who wanted to get to the Spiš chapter addressed Hedvige. She agreed to meet tonight. Hedwig forgot that Barborka was alone in the castle. Meanwhile, soldiers attacked the castle and kidnapped Barborka. When Philip came to the castle and saw the hadviga and saw the empty bed, he turned and ran after Nicholas. When he ran after Nicholas, he started begging him not to kill Barbora. Míkulas told him that he wouldn't kill her just that Philip would never see her again and disappeared.

From those periods when the moon is full, to see a young girl in a white robe and her hair walk in walks up and calls Barborka's name and stretches as if she wants to capture the moment when her little girl has disappeared from view.
